Merchantville, New Jersey (June 9, 2009) Global Exchange Group, a division of Fulton Bank, has announced that it will partner with Chrome River Technologies, a provider of online expense reporting and spend management services for law firms and other professional service organizations. Global Exchange has been a leading provider of secure global accounts payable solutions for over 15 years.

The Chrome River and Global Exchange partnership will focus on sharing best practices with the potential to develop further integration to benefit their clients. Global Exchange and Chrome River clients include many top law firms. Both companies have extensive knowledge in professional services firms' cost recovery issues from both an international accounts payable and expense perspective. Global Exchange and Chrome River services will improve any size firm's operations and provide an immediate return on investment.

"Global Exchange actively partners with other industry leaders so that we can continue to offer a wide array of services and increased accessibility. We are confident that our law firm clients and other professional services partners will be very satisfied with our affiliation with Chrome River," said Anthony Loiacono, president of sales and marketing for Global Exchange. "ChromeRiver and Global Exchange have each worked to improve productivity, both internally and for our clients. Our new partnership will enable us to enhance these efforts for the benefit of our mutual clients."

"We are very pleased to have an affiliation with Global Exchange," said Dave Terry, COO for Chrome River. "In this current economic climate, firms are looking specifically at the types of complementary services provided by Chrome River and Global Exchange to control costs, increase internal process efficiencies and improve spend compliance.”
